ity the term misfit the trade denominates: All by the term misfit the trade denominates: All clothing left on the merchanttailors' hands. This occurs in a dozen or more ways. Frequently gentlength, after ordering suits, find that they need the cash worse than they do the clothing. The consequence is that they forfeit their deposit and the tailor finds himself stuck with the suit. At times, two, the tailor fails to satisfy in fit or finish. Tailors hate to lose good austomers, and rather than allow them to go away dissatisfied the offendance country against a property of the programment of the suits. ing garment goes among the misfits, while new garments that will satisfy are made to replace them. These mistits the tailor is unable to sell for several reasons. He hasn't the assortment to attract attention, and to attempt to convert those who come after ordered goods into buyers of readymade clothing would ruin the trade of the merchant tailor. It is then we come in with the cash and the garments change hands.

A Landlord's Struggle for Life.

in passing through the woods he heard cries for help proceeding from a ravine a few rods distant from the road. Springing from his carriage and running hastily to the odge. his carriage and running hastily to the edge offering better goods for less money than of the ravine, Mr. Derby saw an infuriate of the ravine, Mr. Derby saw an infuriate bear raging around the trunk of a small tree, eagerly trying to dislodge Gardner Maloney, a Saranac guide, who had taken refuge in the branches of the tree, With genuine heroism Mr. Derby drew his revolver, a Smith & Wesson seven-shooter, 44-calibre, and rushed to the rescue. Skilled in woodcraft, he was enabled to creep, unobserved by the bear, to within a short range, when he opened fire upon the brute. The first shot took effect in the shoulder and was followed by a second that lodged in the was followed by a second that lodged in the bear's head. The only effect of these was to distract the attention and increase the fury of the bear, who abandoned Maloney and directed his attention to Mr. Derby. He charged furiously upon that gentleman, who coolly fired two shots with wonderful precision at the approaching brute, and turning, beat a hasty retreat in the direc-tion of the road. The speed told rapidly upon Mr. Derby, who turns the scales at 230 pounds, but he made a tremendous effort to reach his team, a pair of spirited young horses, thinking if he could once gain his seat in the carriage, the team would afford safety. Unfortunately, the horses, excited by the firing were on the alert, and catching sight of the bear, ran furiously down the road leaving Mr. Derby to settle with the bear. Not a moment was to be lost. Mr. Derby discovered a tree near by. Springing to its lower branches he reached a point of safety half dead with exhaustion. The bear, bleeding profusely from many wounds, was undaunted and aggressive, and did not leave his enemy long to arrange a new campaign, but began the ascent of the tree. Mr. Derby drew a sheath knife, and with that in his teeth, prepared for a desperate encounter. Discharging the three remaining shots of his revolver at the head of the bear he seized the knife, and holding by a limb with his left hand, struck desperately at the fore feet of the climber, nearly severing one claw and cutting enormous gashes in the animal's shoulders and head. While struggling for his life the limb by which Mr. Derby was holding broke, and he was precipitated to the ground 10 feet, sustaining several severe bruises and a badly sprained shoulder. In his eagerness to reach his foe the bear tumbled from the tree also, and rushed at Mr. Derby, who had recovered his feet, and unable to retreat, was awaiting the attack, his sheath-knife in hand. The bear arose on his haunches, and by a dexterous thrust Mr. Derby's knife was driven straight through his heart, and the animal succombed. Mr. Derby suffered severe scratches and loss of considerable blood. His clothing was literally converted into strings by the claws of the bear. Exhausted and suffering from loss of blood, Mr. Derby was

How to Secure Good Husbands .-Among the Zuni Indians, who have recently come to the front by coming East for ocean water, there is said to be a social custom that might be worth adopting in more civilized circles. In Zuni-land the houses belong to the women instead of the men, so a man can marry without first being obliged to buy or hire a house; marrying men are therefore abundant among the Zunis. On the other hand, a man who marries can occupy his wife's house only during good behavior, the wife having always the right to put an unsatisfactory husband out of doors. This is a privilege that would raise many an American wife from abject slavery to the rank of equal partner in the conjugal firm. But whether for husband or wife, the Zuni plan is an advantageous one; it encourages early marriages, assures every woman of a home, so that she need not marry merely to get one, and it keeps husbands in order, for almost any man will behave himself if
